ANNUAL TRIBAL COUNCIL ELECTIONS MAIL-IN BALLOTING

Following the Election Committee's recommendation, Tribal Council has made the difficult decision, based on their Oath of Office to protect the health and welfare of the Tribe, to hold elections by mail in ballots.

The process will be as follows:

- Ballots will be created by a third party (MK Elections), and mailed by them. Each mailing will include two envelopes: postage paid return envelope and a secret ballot envelope.
- Ballots will be mailed by July 3, 2020 . They must be returned via USPS to the PO Box listed on the return envelope.
- Ballots need to be received by July 25, 2020. No exceptions. Anything received after July 25, 2020 will not be counted.

IMPORTANT: Do not drop off ballots at the Tribal Center—they will not be accepted and must be mailed for security purposes.

- Please ensure enough time for USPS to deliver the ballot by due date of July 25, 2020.
- Date & time of ballot count will be advertised so that representatives of the candidates may witness the count.
- Barcodes on the return envelope will be scanned to ensure authenticity of each ballot and qualification of voter.
- Once results are certified, a run-off election will take place. Watch for more information to follow.

Information and updates will be available at: squaxinland.org/elections

The ballots will be mailed to each tribal member at their enrollment address. Please update your address by contacting enrollment at 360-432-3888 or tford@squaxin.us.

Questions can be directed to: elections@squaxin.us or visit www.squaxinland.org/elections

See the list of candidates on Page 3.

Walking On Donna Lopeman-Baker

Donna Jean Lopeman-Baker passed away on June 8th at Mason General Hospital. She was 56 years old.

Donna was born in Tacoma, Washington on October 25, 1963. She was raised in Kamilche by her parents, Dave and Shirley (Rogers)Lopeman and, of course, a large extended family.

She was an enrolled Squaxin Island tribal member.

Donna loved her family and friends. She grew up with lots of cousins and friends to hang out with. Her pride and joy were her children and grandchildren. That is what meant the most to Donna, the relationships with those she loved.

She married Roy Dorland in 1981. Together they had three children, Steven, Cynthia, and David. That marriage ended in divorce and she later married Robert Baker.

She leaves behind her two sons, Steven (Cotie) and David (Melanie) and five grandchildren, Owen, Finn, Zayne, Totten, and Lillie.

Her parents and her daughter, Cynthia, predeceased Donna.

Due to the Covid-19 pandemic, Donna was laid to rest by a small gathering at the Squaxin Island Sacred Grounds on June 14, 2020.

Squaxin Island Tribe - Family Services - Elders' Building

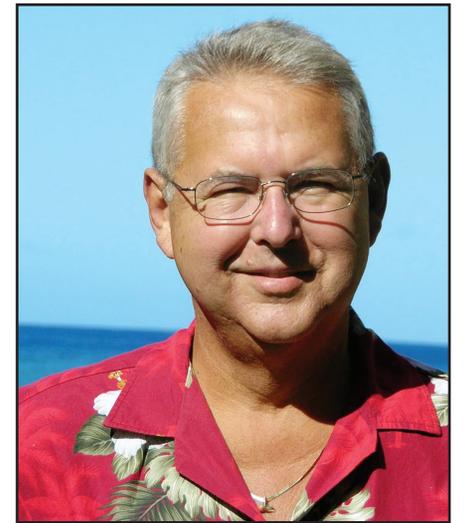

For Elders and Community Members Seeking Services for Elders - 360-432-3844

June 1, 2020

These FAQs are provided in response to phasing in services and Elders receiving ongoing services, support and understanding programs during this time.

- o The Elders' Building will lag by at least a month on opening to all, holding events and not serving meals there.
 - o Why? Elders are still in a risk category and we want to get specialty cleaning and equipment, which is in high demand and yet to be scheduled.
 - o Meals will still be delivered.
 - o Staff will still be available and all the same services.
 - o We want to be able to provide personal protective equipment (PPE) to all who eventually return and enter the building and need time to get this, also, in demand item. Call to learn more.
- o How should we apply for, and receive assistance?
 - o It will be the same system.
- o Can we come drop by in person?
 - o No, we will still have the Elders' Building closed and will keep delivering meals to elders. The food bank is still open on Fridays and if you have been getting that, you still will get that on Friday.
- o Will we know when it is reopen?
 - o Yes and if you have a preferred way of communication, let us know. For example, some prefer a call, a text, a Facebook posting and/or a note.

2020 Elections

Twin Rivers Ranch Preserve: The Next Step

It has been 10 years since Capitol Land Trust purchased Twin Rivers Ranch Preserve. During that time, Capitol Land Trust has been active in restoring the ecological health of the property. And that work continues!

We are excited to share the next step in Twin Rivers Ranch Preserve's journey - the failing bridge crossing Cranberry Creek will be removed this year! If you've ever been to the preserve, you may remember holding your breath as you drove across it.

In partnership with the Squaxin Island Tribe, Mason Conservation District, and support from the Department of Ecology's Terry Husseman Account, the removal of the bridge and nearby streambank armoring will allow the salmon-bearing creek to flow naturally and make space for native re-vegetation.

Twin Rivers Ranch Preserve is just north of Shelton and spans the entire northern shoreline of Oakland Bay. Its 133 acres protects the lower reaches of two salmon-bearing creeks (Cranberry Creek and Deer Creek) and their estuaries; 3,200 feet of Puget Sound shoreline; plus, wetlands, forest, and grassland. And its adjacent mudflats support aquaculture for local shellfish companies and the Squaxin Island Tribe.

The Preserve lies within the traditional territory of the Sa-He-Wa-Mish, who were sustained by the rich natural resources in the area. Native ownership of the property and Oakland Bay was lost in 1854 when the Medicine Creek Treaty went into effect.

Shortly thereafter (possibly as early as 1856), the land was homesteaded by the Jacob Ooley Eckler family. As logging operations expanded in the Shelton area in the late 1800s, a short railroad line was built diagonally across the property by the Shelton Logging Company for transporting logs.

Squaxin Island Tribe received a $20,000 grant for the Cranberry Creek bridge removal project from the WA State Department of Ecology. The Tribe will use the award to remove the failing 55-foot log bridge over Cranberry Creek. They will also decommission the access road on either side, remove riprap, re-plant native vegetation, and install a new access road that avoids crossing Cranberry Creek. Removing the bridge will allow juvenile Coho salmon and other fish to finally move unimpeded from Oakland Bay to Lake Limerick, Cranberry Lake, and associated wetlands.

OFFICIAL BALLOT LIST CANDIDATES

The names below, members of the Squaxin Island Tribe, have accepted nomination for candidacy for an open position on Tribal Council.

Sgwi' Gwi Recap

The annual Sgwi' Gwi Celebration usually includes about 400 people sharing dinner and cheering on students and graduates at all levels. For 2020, in accordance with public health guidelines during the COVID-19 pandemic, the Tribal Council has cancelled large community events like Sgwi' Gwi. However, the Tribal Council, Education Commission, and Education Department would still like to recognize this year's students for their hard work. The gifting that is a part of Sgwi' Gwi continues, with graduates receiving education incentive awards from the Tribal Council.

The Sgwi' Gwi banquet usually includes gifts to the graduates in attendance, and gift cards for the K-12 students in attendance. Without a Sgwi' Gwi banquet, we still want to make sure to acknowledge the college and vocational graduates from Squaxin with a gift. If you have sent your college or vocational graduation information to the Education Department, you should be receiving a gift in the mail.

Children in grades K-12 would have normally been recognized on stage at Sgwi' Gwi and received a gift card. If your K-12 child(ren) would have been receiving a gift card at the 2020 Sgwi' Gwi, we ask that you email us your child's name, grade and mailing address that we can mail a gift card to your child. We want to make sure not to miss any children being acknowledged with a gift card.

Attention Higher Education Students

By Mandy Valley - New and returning Higher Education students - Fall quarter/semester is starting back up soon! If you haven't got your paperwork turned in yet please do so ASAP or you could lose the opportunity to receive funds for fall. Turning in your required documents early makes the process easier and smoother for everyone involved. If you have any questions, need a Higher Education packet, or need assistance filling out a form, please give me a call at 360-432-3882, or email me at mvalley@squaxin.us.

Squaxin Teen Program News

Jaimie Cruz - During COVID closures, the Squaxin Teen Program has been doing a majority of our connecting via Zoom. We have book clubs on Monday @ 3pm and Wednesday @ 3 pm. On Thursday's, we meet for youth council @ 4pm and have had some wonderful guest speakers. With school ending I am hopeful that teens will have more time to connect through all of this.

If you are willing, I would like any Squaxin Community Member, 12-18 years old, to submit a video about what you have been doing during the COVID pandemic. In the video, please include your name, age, and a few things about what has been helping keep you busy. If you have any questions or comments my number is 360-742-6527, or you can reach me by email at jcruz@squaxin.us.

YOU DID IT!

She is currently employed in Indian Country as an intern at Pyramid Communications in Seattle.

TRANSIT

Squaxin Transit is adding additional routes to coincide with Mason Transit (MTA) and Grays Harbor Transit (GHT). Below you will see the NEW ROUTES connecting to MTA and GHT in McCleary.

With cities starting to open back up, many of them are wondering how to manage their public transportation systems. It is so important, at this time, to take precautions. Without a vaccine or a cure for COVID-19, opening up is risky...

Therefore, we want to add connections to MTA and GHT transit lines in small steps... and continue to open with success!

Reminder: Passengers will be required to wear a mask at all times. If you are ill, or experiencing any type of symptoms, we request that you to please stay home! If you need transportation to the Health Clinic due to any type of illness, please call for special transportation.

Unemployment for Treaty Fishers

The information in this article is not intended to be legal advice and you should not consider it legal advice. Reading this article does not establish an attorney-client relationship. This article is providing information only. You should contact an attorney for specific advice about your situation.

If you are a Treaty fisher and are either self-employed or an independent contractor, you may be eligible for unemployment benefits. Please read the following.

Due to COVID-19 pandemic restrictions, Squaxin treaty fishers and shellfishers (“fishers”) may have seen a decrease in treaty fishing income. Treaty fishers rely on this income to support themselves and their families. Their economic losses may have occurred due to falling markets, closed or delayed fisheries, and postponed openings. These losses may also occur due to social distance requirements or recommendations that limit the number of people per clam dig or per boat. Typically, no replacement income source is available to treaty fishers in times of hardship. In response to the pandemic, however, the federal government extended unemployment benefits to self-employed individuals and independent contractors through Pandemic Unemployment Assistance (PUA). Treaty fishers may be eligible for unemployment benefits as they are either self-employed or independent contractors.

Eligibility:

Are treaty fishers eligible for unemployment benefits because of the COVID-19 pandemic, even though they are not employed by a government or business?

Generally, yes. The federal CARES legislation expanded unemployment benefits to freelancers, independent contractors, and other self-employed workers who have lost income due to the COVID-19 pandemic. This is called Pandemic Unemployment Assistance or PUA. This category includes treaty fishers who have lost income sources due to the pandemic. Reasons may include closure of treaty fishing areas, reduced sales of fish resulting in decreased income, or inability to participate in Treaty fishing due to a government isolation order.

I'm on the ABON program and receive Social Security Income (SSI) due to a disability while also participating in clam digs. Will claiming unemployment for my lost Treaty income harm my SSI benefits?

Possibly. Claiming PUA for lost treaty fishing income may put you over the allowed monthly unearned income for SSI eligibility, and could result in a disruption in or termination of your SSI benefits. Additionally, there may be concerns about your ability to work under disability. You should contact a private attorney to discuss your situation. Northwest Justice Project assists low-income individuals with legal concerns, including SSI and unemployment, and can be contacted at 1-888-201-1014.

My Treaty fishing work is seasonal. I haven't worked since last fall. My fishing season is supposed to have already started, but hasn't yet, or was delayed or limited, due to the pandemic. Am I eligible for PUA benefits?

Possibly. You must have been able to work but haven't due to the seasonality of the treaty fishing and a delayed opening of the fishery for reasons related to the pandemic, and not for other reasons (such as an injury). On your application, use either the date that the fishery opened or the date that you were unable to fish or suffered a loss because of limits on fishing caused by the pandemic, whichever is later. Benefits should be retroactive to either the date you first experience an income loss due to COVID-19 or February 2, 2020, whichever is later.

I am employed by the Tribe or another employer and also participate in Treaty fishing. Are PUA benefits available to me?

Not likely. In order to be eligible for PUA when you continue to receive one income source, your lost income must have been a substantial portion of your total income. You can use the Washington Economic Security Department's benefit calculator to determine if your lost income would result in eligibility for PUA. You can find this calculator at <https://esd.wa.gov/unemployment/calculate-your-benefit>.

If my Treaty business income is reduced, but not eliminated, am I still eligible?

Possibly. If your income is reduced as a result of the pandemic but not entirely eliminated, you may be eligible for PUA benefits. Complete the claims forms discussed below.

Who administers PUA?

The Washington State Economic Security Department (WESD) administers both regular unemployment and PUA.

How do I apply for PUA benefits?

You must first apply for regular unemployment benefits. If you did not have an employer, WESD will deny your application. A denial may happen right away or could take several weeks. Once you've received the denial for regular unemployment benefits, you will need to apply for PUA by completing the COVID-19 PUA Claim. While you are waiting for a denial, you'll need to file a weekly claim as described below to maintain eligibility and receive retroactive pay.

You may apply for unemployment benefits at <https://esd.wa.gov/> or by calling 1-800-318-6022 (toll free). Additional information regarding unemployment related to COVID-19 (coronavirus) is located at <https://esd.wa.gov/newsroom/covid-19> and <https://www.esd.wa.gov/unemployment/self-employed>.

Use this step-by-step guide for completing the PUA claim form. https://esdorcharstorage.blob.core.windows.net/esdwa/Default/ESDWAGOV/Unemployment/Guide_for_expanded_benefits_COVID.pdf

If I participated in treaty fishing and am also employed full-time by the Tribe, do I have to include my employment with the Tribe on my application?

Yes. You must include on your application your employment with the Tribe and any and all other employment you've held in the last 18 months. If you do not and an award of benefits is later reversed, you will likely have to pay back all unemployment benefits that should not have been awarded to you and may also be subject to penalties.

What documents do I need to submit to WESD to show proof of income?

You'll need to submit a 2019 federal tax document to support your claim (2018 tax documents won't be accepted). Such documents could be:

- 1040-Single Filing
- 1040 – Joint Filing
- 1040-SE3
- 1065 Schedule K-1
- 1099-Misc
- 1125-E
- Schedule C
- Schedule F
- W-2

I'm a Treaty fisher. I and didn't include my fishing income on my federal tax return and don't receive an IRS 1099 Form. Is there something else I can submit as proof of income?

The Squaxin Island Tribe Natural Resources Department can issue a Statement of Income to you that documents all treaty fishing income you earned in January –December 2019. If you meet the other requirements of PUA but do not file a federal tax return, please contact Julie Owens to request a Statement of Income prior to applying for PUA. You'll need to upload the Statement of Income as part of the application process.

Why am being asked for my employer's information when I don't have an employer?

The PUA application will ask for a list of your employers (in any state) for the last 18 months. If you've only worked for yourself for the last 18 months, select "No" for this question. If you've had an employer at any time during the past 18 months, list all employers as well as your self-employed status.

If I am waiting for a denial of regular unemployment benefits before I can complete the PUA claim form, do I need to do anything while I wait?

Yes. You will need to submit your weekly claim during this time period. If/when you are approved for PUA benefits, doing this will ensure that you receive pay dating back to the week that you were initially unable to work.

Is there a waiting period to receive PUA benefits?

No. Once approved, your benefits will be retroactive to the week that you were unable to work or February 2, 2020, whichever is later.

Payments:

How soon will I begin receiving unemployment benefits after I submit the PUA application?

It may take several weeks for WESD to verify, approve, and begin paying your claim. All benefits will be retroactive to the week that you were unable to work or experienced a loss in income.

Will I receive the extra $600 per week under the federal CARES Act?

Yes. If you have been approved for unemployment benefits and that benefit is at least $1 per week, you will receive the additional $600 a week retroactive to March 29 or the week you became unemployed, whichever is later. This will automatically be included in your weekly unemployment benefit amount each week through July 25, 2020 or when you stop filing weekly claims, whichever is sooner.

Weekly Claims for Benefits

How long can I receive the PUA benefits?

You will receive the PUA benefits until one of the following happens, whichever is soonest: (1) December 30, 2020, (2) at the end of 39 weeks of benefits, or (3) you otherwise lose eligibility or fail to file a weekly claim, whichever occurs sooner. The extra $600 per week ends July 24, 2020, but you'll continue to receive your calculated unemployment benefits amount for the remainder of your eligibility period.

Do I have to search for work through an employer while receiving PUA benefits?

Due to the pandemic closures, all work search requirements are waived and you are not required to search for work. However, when work search requirements are eventually required, you will have to search for work, either through an employer or through self-employment.

If I'm still receiving payments for services I rendered prior to the Pandemic, will that make me ineligible for unemployment in a given week?

Maybe. You'll need to report this income when you certify for the week. If you do not receive a PUA payment one week due to the income you received that week, you may still be eligible for ongoing benefits the following weeks.

I'm still receiving some income from clam digs, but less than I used to earn due to less frequent digs during the Pandemic. Do I still file a weekly claim?

Yes. You should continue to file weekly claims.

I had a period of lost treaty income related to the pandemic. I have since started earning treaty income again. Do I need to report the Treaty income I earn to Unemployment?

Yes. You are required to report all unearned and earned income, including any Treaty income earned in the benefit week. Failure to report income to Unemployment, including treaty income, may result in a repayment requirement and penalties.

Taxes and Repayment

Do I need to repay any unemployment benefits since I don't have an employer that pays into the unemployment system?

No. There is no repayment requirement for unemployment benefits (unless you are overpaid for some reason).

Treaty Fishing income is tax exempt under Section 7873 of the Internal Revenue Code. Do I need to pay taxes on the unemployment benefits that are replacing my tax-exempt Treaty income.

Yes. Unemployment benefits, including PUA, are taxable.

I've been notified that I received an overpayment and must repay all or a portion of the benefits I received. How did this happen?

An overpayment happens when unemployment or PUA benefits were paid and then the claim was retroactively denied or the award amount diminished. This can be a result of inaccurate information given in the initial application or the weekly claims or a calculation error. You will be required to repay any benefits overpayments. You may want to consult a private attorney concerning any request for repayment.

I've already started receiving PUA related to loss of treaty income due to the pandemic. However, I have not reported either earned income from employment or earned income from treaty income since I started receiving these benefits. What should I do?

You are required to report any earned and unearned income to WESD in filing your weekly claim. If you failed to do so, contact an attorney to determine how to report the error to WESD and what repayment requirements or penalties you may be responsible for.

I have additional questions and may need to contact a private attorney who specialized in unemployment. Who should I contact?

The Unemployment Law Project (888-441-9178) or the Northwest Justice Project (888-201-1012) may be able to assist. Both of these organizations provide legal advice and/or representation and well versed in Pandemic Unemployment Assistance benefits.

State awards $4.4 million for tribal victims of crime services initiative

OLYMPIA, WA -- The Washington State Office of Crime Victims Advocacy (OCVA) Victims of Crime Act (VOCA) program announced a final tranche of $691,810 in grants to five Washington state federally recognized tribes for the Tribal Victims of Crime Services Initiative beginning July 1. The latest awards take the total funding to $4.4 million, serving 20 tribes.

State and tribal officials report the supported programs have become even more important since the onset of the coronavirus pandemic, as stress on individuals and resources available to serve them escalates.

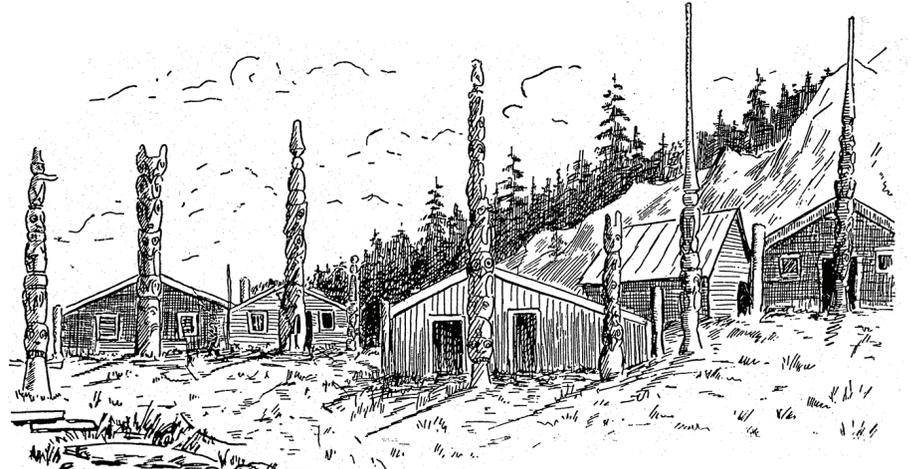

“Tribes are in the best position to provide appropriate services to crime victims in their communities, but resources have been severely stretched by the COVID crisis” said Washington State Department of Commerce Director Lisa Brown. “Helping to fill the funding gap provides services victims need in a challenging time and strengthens tribal communities.”

Squaxin Island Tribe:

Three-year agreement, 7/1/2019 through 6/30/2022, total award: $414,948 ($138,316 per year)

The funding supports key goals to develop, enhance and sustain victim assistance programs within tribal communities. These programs provide a coordinated and collaborative multidisciplinary response to support intervention for families and the community.

Components of the tribal initiative include crisis services, advocacy and outreach to individuals who have been harmed. The services are trauma-informed, person-centered and culturally rooted.

Feeling Strong during COVID-19

There are many things we cannot control during this pandemic, but we are still strong. Our ancestors and tribes overcame many difficult and challenging things. By believing in ourselves and our communities, we can rise up and deal with challenges effectively.

Here are some ways to feel strong during COVID-19:

- Separate things that are within your control versus not. For example, we can't control if people get very sick, but we can control washing hands, wearing a mask, practicing physical distancing.
- View problems as tasks to be mastered that can be broken down into smaller pieces. For example, if you are frustrated with cooking, pick one dish to learn to make well.
- Don't dwell on mistakes. View them as learning opportunities.
- Give verbal encouragement. Tell your children you believe in them and love them. Share messages about strength – you and your family are here because of strong ancestors and relatives. Share family stories.
- Difficulty and challenges do not mean failure or defeat. Recommit yourself to overcoming challenges and support your children doing the same thing.

Use the pages of this book to help you talk about this with your children.

- When Tara and Virgil feel scared and worried about COVID-19, Grandma reminds them of things they can do to help. Ask your child:
 - What are some things that help you feel less scared or worried?
 - What are other ways you can help people in your family or community?
- Grandma describes earning Eagle feathers through hard times or showing a lot of responsibility and respect. Ask your child:
 - Tell me about a time when you felt something was very hard? (examples may include something hard at school, climbing something or riding a bike, something difficult with a friendship or family member)
 - What things helped you overcome that challenge?
 - What are ways that you have shown responsibility?
 - What are ways that you have shown respect towards others?
- Ask your child: What makes you feel strong?
 - Who in your family or community do you think is strong and why?

Managing Stress During COVID-19

There are so many sources of stress right now, including worry about the safety of loved ones, lost jobs, and disrupted routines.

Some signs of stress:

- Low energy
- Quick temper
- Trouble sleeping
- Not hungry OR hungrier than normal
- Feeling depressed, sad, or anxious, worried
- Drinking or using drugs more

Some ways to handle stress:

- Take a break from the news or social media
- Go for a walk
- Take deep breaths or stretch
- Call or video chat with a loved one
- Pray or use traditional medicines

Masking Minimizes Coronavirus “Dose”

Submitted by Kyle Ferguson, PhD (Clinical Psychologist) at the Clinic - As the country reopens for business, does that mean it is now safe to let our collective guard down? Barring a widely available vaccine or effective treatments, as long as there is active coronavirus anywhere, outbreaks are possible everywhere. Therefore, the short answer is “No”; it is not safe to let our guard down.

Experts assume there is a sizable number of asymptomatic (no symptoms) infected individuals who spread the virus unknowingly. Based on limited information, the number of asymptomatic spreaders is possibly over 50%. Barring universal testing, however, we will never know.

Coronavirus particles are smaller than the dust you see in sunlit beams of light. Respiratory (breathing) infections occur from inhaling those particles found in droplets or aerosols (very fine particles). Infected individuals exhale and release virus into the air around them every time they breathe, speak, sing, cough, or sneeze.

Aerosols can accumulate in poorly ventilated areas and remain infectious indoors for hours. It is also important to note that – as infectious aerosols collect indoors – “infected air” can travel distances farther than 6 ft. Accordingly, even if you were appropriately social distancing indoors (though not wearing masks), over time, infectious aerosols might reach you.

So just how many particles does it take to cause COVID-19 (i.e., the disease caused by the coronavirus)? Only one particle? Dozens of particles? Millions? Billions? Please read on.

Viral “Dose”

Scientists do not know the minimum number of virus particles or minimal infectious dose to cause the COVID-19 disease. Other factors, too, increase your chances of infection. Your age (immune systems sadly wear out over time) and whether you are immunocompromised due to some other disease process (e.g., heart disease, diabetes, cancer, etc.) also play key roles in how well your body beats back the coronavirus.

If the novel coronavirus is anything like its older coronavirus sibling, SARS (Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome; remember SARS from 2002 and 2003?), an infective dose is only a few hundred viral particles. Given how quickly the coronavirus has spread across the planet, the minimal infective dose is probably somewhere in that ballpark – in the order of a few hundred or, possibly, a few thousand viral particles.

In an influential scientific paper on the influenza virus (“flu”), the investigators reported that the number of viral particles generated from just one cough ranges from 400 particles in one individual to as many as 516,800 particles per cough in another. Accordingly, some individuals exhale considerably more viral particles than others do.

Individuals who produce particles on the high end of the viral-dose continuum are obviously more likely to spread the illness to others (so-called “superspreaders”). Some scientists estimate that superspreaders generally produce 100 times the viral load compared to the average.

Unfortunately, with COVID-19, as indicated, some superspreaders experience no symptoms or only very mild symptoms (e.g., runny nose, slight fatigue, etc.). Perhaps, thinking they are virus free, they might not take necessarily precautions to control the spread of the virus to uninfected individuals around them (e.g., not washing their hands regularly, not covering their cough, sharing food, eating out of the same popcorn bowl, snuggling, etc.).

Back in March of this year, one superspreader in Skagit County, Washington infected almost everyone (87%) in his or her choir during a 2.5-hour choir practice. The 61 members of the choir were not wearing masks. Three individuals were sick enough to be admitted to hospital and, sadly, two people ended up dying from COVID-19.

Washington State New Cases of Covid-19

Although we seen a sharp decline of new cases after the stay at home order was issued, we are seeing a slight increase of cases in the recent month. Restrictions are beginning to be reduced but that doesn't mean we can let our guard down. Let's continue to do our part by following the CDC's guidelines:

- Social distancing-stay home! If you must go out, avoid gatherings or crowded places and stay at least 6 feet away from other people,
- Face mask – wear a face mask when you must go out in public,
- Wash your hands often with either soap and water for 20 seconds, or use a hand sanitizer that has at least 60% alcohol,
- Cover your cough with a single use tissue, or cough into your elbow; then wash your hands,
- Avoid touching your face; your eyes, nose, or mouth. If you must, then wash your hands afterwards,
- Clean and disinfect frequently touched objects daily, such as, door knobs.

Go to our CERT website at: <https://squaxinland.org/community/community-emergencyresponse-team-cert/> for links on Covid-19 and emergency preparedness.

Let's all be responsible because we are all in this together.

Masking

The superspreader is labeled "index case" in the figure on the previous page. Remarkably, all those individuals appearing in the yellow boxes got sick from that one individual. Sometimes a picture is worth a thousand words.

As silly as it sounds, the rationale for masking is the same as the rationale for diapers. Let me explain.

Parents of boys fully appreciate the challenge of changing diapers. With laser-precision, my son could indiscriminately douse a sleep-deprived parent or grandparent who was not fast enough on the draw for our little sharpshooter.

Had the writer been the one wearing the diaper and, perhaps, Thomas The Tank Engine onesie (I wish! They do not come in my size!), these would provide some protection from a proper soaking. Of course, I would still get uncomfortably wet.

Every parent who has ever been peed on would agree! The best option, obviously, is to put the diaper on him before the waterworks. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of wet clothes!

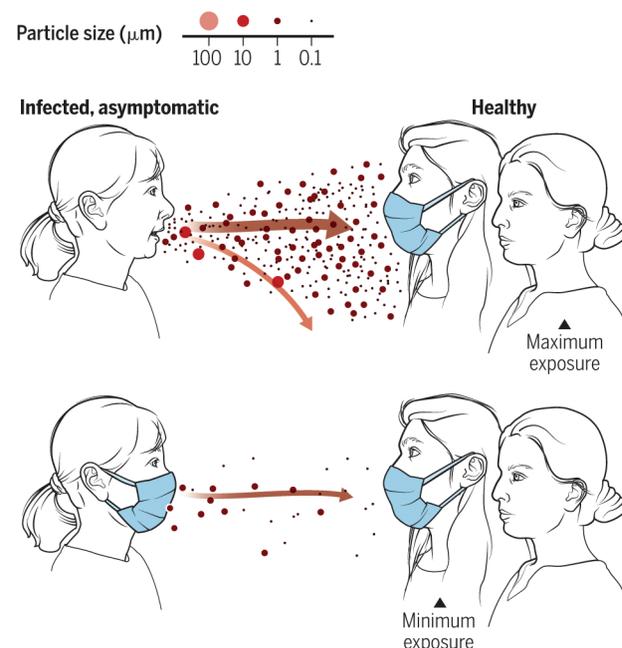

The idea behind masking is the same. An uninfected person wearing one filters out some of the virus particles but particles can and often break through anyway. Virus particles from a cough or sneeze also spread all over surfaces; so if you touch your T-Zone (eyes, nose, mouth – get your head out of the gutter!) you introduce virus into your body. Furthermore, it is hard wearing those dang things perfectly, 100% of the time. They slip. They shimmy. They slide down. And lest we forget: Masking gets a little awkward approaching a bank teller with a slip of paper in your hand.

Ideally, when a sick person (knowingly or unknowingly) wears a mask, the mask traps most if not all of the virus particles before they become airborne droplets or aerosolized (piggybacking on tiny particles floating in the air).

Masks, therefore, offer modest protection for uninfected individuals. Masks offer even greater protection for uninfected people if infected individuals wear them. To lower the spread of infection even further, masking provides maximum protection when EVERYONE wears one when out in public ("universal masking"), as illustrated in the figure below.

Masks reduce airborne transmission

Infectious aerosol particles can be released during breathing and speaking by asymptomatic infected individuals. No masking maximizes exposure, whereas universal masking results in the least exposure.

even further, masking provides maximum protection when EVERYONE wears one when out in public ("universal masking"), as illustrated in the figure below.

In conclusion, masking benefits those around us most. It is a gesture of kindness (which, hopefully, infects others!). It conveys to the world: I'm masking because I care about you!

Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program

Don't Forget.....

WASHINGTON FAMILIES GET HELP TO BUY FOODS DURING SCHOOL CLOSURES

Pandemic EBT (P-EBT) benefits will be available July 2020

Families, including those children who attend a school where meals are free for all students, will need to apply. Families with children who are eligible but not currently receiving free or reduced-price school meals must fill out a meal application with their school district before June 30, before they apply for P-EBT. Call the school if you are not sure if your child is already receiving the free/reduced lunches.

*Families who already receive food benefits and whose children are already receiving "free or reduced" lunches do not need to apply, and a one-time amount up to $399 per child in each household will automatically deposit on existing ebt cards in July.****

P-EBT applications will be available on Washington Connections <https://www.washingtonconnection.org> starting Sunday June 28, 2020.
